

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to FORCE their affiliate stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Because Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, it is obligated by law to serve the public interest.

To remove local affiliates ability to determine their own broadcasting choices is a betrayal of the public trust, and is sufficient reason not to renew Sinclair's licenses.

When large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy.

Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people FROM OUR OWN COMMUNITIES and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them.

They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
